

STATE ATTORNEY
OF TENNESSEE.

I consider Peruna the very finest invigorant and life-giving tonic.
I speak
from ample experience.

HON. LAPS D. MCCORD.
HON. LAPS D. MCCORD, 1225 G St., Washington, D. C., Ex-Adjutant General State of Tennessee, and State Attorney at Nashville, is an ardent friend of Peruna. He does not hesitate to give public endorsement to this very excellent remedy.

As a tonic Peruna has no superior.
But it is as a catharral remedy it has achieved its world-wide notoriety and success.

Any catharral remedy to become permanently effective in the cure of cattharral must contain tonic and invigorating qualities with its anti-catharral qualities. Catharral is always an expression of nerve weakness, either local or general. It is, therefore, important that a catharral remedy should possess reliable invigorating qualities in order to thoroughly rid the system of catharral.

Peruna for Colds.

ington address is, New Willard Hotel,

"I have used Peruna and can recommend your remedy as a very effective cure for colds, and catarrhal complaints."—R. S. Ryan.

BEATS THE RECORD

ONE MAN FATHER OF FORTY-
ONE CHILDREN.

He Had Three Wives and Is Now Only Forty-One Years of Age.
Is of Newberry County.

Columbia, Dec. 19.—The Record of yesterday afternoon stated that Elmer Mayer, of Newberry county, who is serving a sentence in the penitentiary for complicity in the burning of a barn, is the father of forty-one children. The man has practically lived in obscurity, and the wonderful story came to light only by chance, and the world might never have had the knowledge of the unusual case of a prodigious family had not a reporter learned of the facts through a casual conversation as he passed through the capitol grounds where Mayer is working with other fellow convicts.

When Mayer began to give a few facts about his life and made the astounding statement that he is the father of nearly half a hundred children, the reporter began to sit up and take notice and a few words of inquiry brought forth the following remarkable facts:

John Mayer, the hero of the story, is forty-one years of age, and has lived in Newberry county all his life. His home is in the country.
No township. He has taken unto himself as many as three wives, which also adds another interesting feature to his life. From the first marriage 20 children were born, ten sets of twins. Eighteen children resulted from the second union, the number also being twins. The third wife, who is now living in Newberry county, is the mother of thirteen children.

The children at birth were all normal in size and the youngest, a boy, weighed 188 pounds at the age of 11 years, which is another remarkable feature of this wonderful large family of children.
Mayer thought there was nothing unusually interesting in connection with his life, so he never told the president about it, or had his picture printed in the papers at the time when Roosevelt's noted remarks before the woman's congress brought forth many stories of large families to prove that the nation's chief magistrate, was in error when he uttered his warning against race suicide. He tells day by day with the guard's gun always in sight, the gamb of a felon about him, a constant reminder of his violation against his country's laws, and bearing his distinction in silence.

Value of Sweet Milk.

The value of the pure sweet skim milk fed to pigs fresh from the cream separator, was found by the well-known dairyman, Mr. C. P.
Goodrich, to be much greater than usually estimated. He found that 100 pounds of gain in pigs weighing 125 pounds when fed alone, and one bushel of corn fed alone made a gain of ten pounds. This puts a high value on sweet skim milk.
When he joined skim milk and corn in due proportions the feed value of both were increased 20 per cent, showing that both made a fine balanced ration. He fed 100 pounds of sweet skim milk with one bushel of corn, and that gave 18 pounds of gain to the shoats. Heard's Dairyman says:

"In our own experience we have made skim milk worth 43 cents per 100 when fed to grade Guernsey calves sold at 7 months of age at $25 each.
"It is well enough to say that a large part of the feeding value of separator skim milk may be wasted by improper methods of feeding; also its best value is always found in feeding it to young pigs and heifers."

Paradise is not found by fleeing from pain.

Money to Loan.

I have arranged to negotiate loans on improved farms at eight per cent

NIGHT RIDING.

long, black coats, black masks, trimmed in white, and some had false beards attached to the bottom.

On one occasion Deputy Sheriff of the riders, came to a meeting Mays, since resigned, who was one unmasked. At this meeting Garrett Johnson was chosen chief and other captains were named for different localities and authorized to order raids whenever the riders of a certain locality thought something needed regulating. Sometimes a member failed to appear for riders and on those occasions the riders went after the missing men and forced them to go on the raids.

Night Rider Oath.

The night rider oath in full was:
"You do solemnly swear in presence of Almighty God and these witnesses that you desire to become a night rider; that you will not write, talk or tell to any one of the secrets of this order of night riders; that, if you do talk, write or tell to any person any of the secrets of the order, we are permitted to do with you as we see fit. You know death, hell and destruction will be your portion and that your body will not be buried in a graveyard. Do you willingly and freely submit to all this, so help you God?"

Prisoner frankly admitted that he had sold liquor illegally, had been indicted, tried and convicted for this offense, both in Tennessee and Kentucky. However, he never denied his guilt and never perjured himself to escape punishment. The witness was a tartar under cross-examination. Once, when asked about a date, he replied that he did not keep a diary, meaning a diary. When the defendants' attorney attempted to quiz him about milk the witness said: "I used it when I was small, I'm told, but haven't since."

His Source of Revenue.

His home had been under his hat for years, he said, and he did not care much where he stopped. Asked where he got his money, he said to Attorney Pierce: "I got it like you got that $10 from me for defending me when you did not do it."

On October 19 the riders learned that Rankin and Col. Taylor were at the Walnut Log hotel in the heart of the riders' country.

"Tid" Burton, one of the defendants, told Fehring to notify the band to meet that night to attend to Rankin and Taylor. Fehring got one of Garrett Johnson's horses and rode all day summoning the band.
The riders met near Johnson's that night. The band included the eight defendants.

They proceeded to the hotel after Garrett Johnson had forced "Ed" Powell to take the riders there.
Witness said that Garrett Johnson was the spokesman and gave the orders to Rankin and Taylor to dress.
On the march to the densely wooded bank of the slough where Rankin was slain, the witness said, Johnson did all the talking, the others, about 50 in number, including the defendants, following silently.
Fehring said to the victim:
"Do you want to say anything to the lord? If you do, say it now." Rankin replied: "I've attended to that."

Shot by Bob Hoffman.

Just as they pulled the rope, Bob Hoffman shot Rankin and Sam Applewhite, then said: "I know he is dead, for I put a load of bicycle ball bearings in him." Witness declared that Jess Carter, one of the defendants, and a man yet to be tried put the rope around Rankin's neck.
When Col. Taylor jumped into the slough everybody shot into the water and Fehring beat around in it with a pole. Meantime men holding the rope let it go, and Rankin's body crumpled up and dropped to the ground. His stiff hat fell beneath his head, holding it off the ground, his glasses dropped back into the water, which rapidly filled with blood from the wound in the temple.

Just before the body fell, a rider, not on trial, emptied six .38 calibre bullets in the hanging man.

The riders then went to where their horses were hitched and where four men had been left on guard.
The witness said that Garrett Johnson addressed them before they dispersed, saying: "Burn your masks and say nothing about this night's work."

During the testimony the soldier guard was increased. As soon as the court took luncheon recess the armed sentries marched in and took Fehring out. Then the court asked the newspaper correspondents not to mention the names of those implicated by the witness who are not on trial.

Wise Words.

Worry is half of weariness.
Revenge never is so sweet as when forgone.
The critical eye remains longest in ignorance.
No man is undone as long as he has a work to do.
You cannot bless men until you believe in them.

He is lost already to whom sacrifice appears as folly.
The saddest slavery is that of being ruled by our pleasures.
The sins we wink at today are the ones we wail tomorrow.

Spiritually the most helpless artists are those who refuse to help.
Life barriers that resist all force crumble before friendship.

The fool is known by offering his forethought after the event.
Tomorrow's burdens always prove too much for today's back.

You have no right to set up your fad as another man's faith.
Keep the heart healthy and happiness will take care of itself.

Nothing heals our own wounds quicker than helping others.

Men are to be known by their aims rather than by their origins.
If you would be far-sighted you must learn to live on the heights.
Our own sins grow fast behind our backs while we are gazing at the faults of our neighbors.

"AUF WIEDERSEHN"

The sun was just hiding its shining head behind a bank of gloriously colored clouds, reaching far over the towering peaks of mountains which closed protectingly the little sleepy town of M—. One long crimson ray lingered caressingly on the golden hair and sweet upturned face of a girl, whose eyes were fixed searchingly on the youth at her side. He gazed moodily at the tumbling, tossing, turbulent little stream flowing rapidly beside them, and then, when the silence became unbearable, he turned quickly to her, saying:

"That river is symbolic of my life —restlessly hurrying on its way, never pausing in its mad rush over the falls to the great unknown sea beyond—ambitious, searching for that something which is its very life."

"And so, you are—going away?" The words were a mere whisper, and as he slowly nodded his head the color left the girl's cheeks and lips, and the hand she laid on his black, rebellious curls trembled. "You never thought of these things before, Ted—you were happy and contented—but now—"

"Now I have awakened. I know where that one thing I desire most lies—appreciation!"

"You—you will come back?"
"Some day—yes." He could not meet the clear blue eyes, could not bear to see the quivering of the white lips, for he knew there lived in his heart the unformed thought that when this grand recognition came to pass he might choose his wife from among the greatest of the land, and the loyal little country sweetheart would be forgotten.

Time moves swiftly on, in spite of broken hearts and forgotten promises, and five years later a sweet-faced woman made her way slowly through a crowded salon where were gathered the fashionable devotees to art. A tiny little maiden, with the same big blue eyes and golden hair clung to her hand as she walked down the long aisles, here eyes traveling quickly from picture to picture, until at last she paused before one which was catalogued "Auf Wiedersehen."

"Maidie!" She turned and the years fell swiftly away as she gazed once more into the eyes of her childhood sweetheart. With the impulsive little gesture he remembered so well, she extended her hand, and his face went white as he clasped it close in his.

"You were looking at my picture?" he asked after a moment of silence.

"Yes," she replied softly. "It is beautiful. I am glad you have been so successful."

"But even you did not quite understand it. No one in the world could! No one knows what I would give to be back in that spot, and these last five years only a dream—a fancy."

"But you are famous now," she answered slowly. "You have found —appreciation."
"Appreciation—the hollow, empty sanction of the world—once my only thought, my ambition—but I left behind me on the banks of this very river, a jewel more priceless than diamonds—left and lost forever!
But let us talk of yourself. I saw you pass through with your—your little one, and I hastened after you, for I was hungry for—news from home."

Her motioned her to a seat a little apart from the crowd, and they moved slowly to it, each busy with their own thoughts. Many curious eyes followed them for the young artist was noted for his taciturnity, and it excited no little comment when he singled this sweet-faced stranger from the rest.

"Maidie, tell me," he whispered at last, "are you happy? Your face is so sad I thought perhaps you, too, remember the past."

"And so I do," she answered gently.

"Remember it, yes," he cried bitterly, "but not as I do. You have your loved ones about you; you have so much more than I to live for."

"And do you love—Maidie?" he asked the child—he could not bring himself to say "mamma." The bright blue eyes looked at him in great surprise, as if the question really needed no answer, then she said:

"Toujours I do—and her loves me—don't you, Auntie Maidie?"

"Auntie!" The word was hardly audible, but it spoke volumes. "She is not—not your own?"

"No—my sister's little daughter."

"But I heard of your marriage to Roberts, and I thought—"

"My sister's marriage," she interrupted; "I am only Auntie Maidie!"

With a deep, fervent "Thank God!" he pressed her hand closely in his, and then whispered brokenly:
"Let us go back, Maidie—back to the banks of that little stream so many miles from here, where I may forget these last five years—and there let me plead with you to forgive me, for surely my punishment has been great."

He read his answer in the soft blush that covered her face, and as he left her at her door he said gently: "Good-by, Maidie; Auf Wiedersehen!"

The reason girls come out of school so attractive is they know they haven't learned anything.

What makes a situation in a novel seem perfectly natural to a woman is to know it could never happen.

Some of the money a man earns would be very useful to him if his family could spare any of it for him to spend himself.

The weariest man in this world is the one who is running from work.
A man may not be able to come out on top, but by and by his hair will.

State of South Carolina, County of Orangeburg.

In Common Pleas.
William C. Rives, et al, Plaintiffs, against William Rives Crum, et al, Defendants.

By virtue of the judgment in the above stated case, I will sell at public auction, at Orangeburg Court House, during the legal hours for sales, on the first Monday in January, 1909, being the fourth day of said month, the following described real estate:

All that certain tract of land situate, lying and being in New Hope township, in the County of Orangeburg, in the State aforesaid, containing sixteen (16) acres, more or less, designated on plat made in said case as Tract "No. 2," and bounded on the north by lands of J. C. Funchess, on the east by a street, on the south by lands of Crum, and on the west by lands of W. P. Dukes.

TERMS: Cash, the purchaser or purchasers to pay for all papers and all taxes falling due after the day of sale; and in case the purchaser or purchasers fail to comply with the terms of sale, said premises will be resold on the same or some subsequent sales day, on the same terms, and at the risk of the former purchaser or purchasers.

ROBT. E. COPES,
Judge of Probate, as Special Referee.
